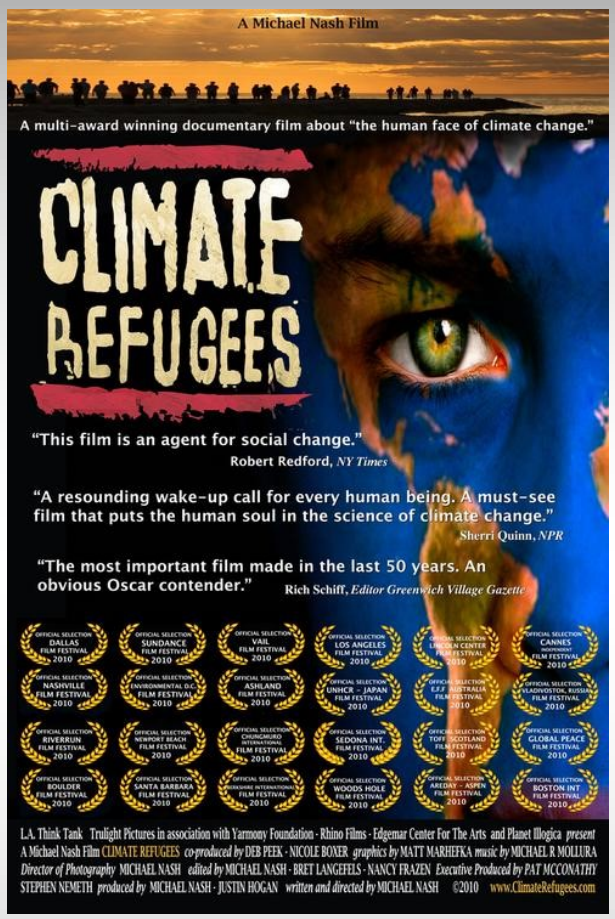
Climate Refugees



"Climate Refugees' is an important film that should be seen no matter what one's views are on the effects of climate change the world over. Not only are there people in this world who are already feeling the devastating toll of this supremely important issue, but after watching Michael Nash's eye-opening documentary, you quickly begin to understand that our own national security is threatened by events happening both within and outside our borders.

Nash has raised a very dark red flag; now, it is up to all of us to heed his warning."
